Accredited Training

Corporate Culcha's latest accredited training program AHC31510 Certificate III in Indigenous Land Management.

Building skills

Building capability

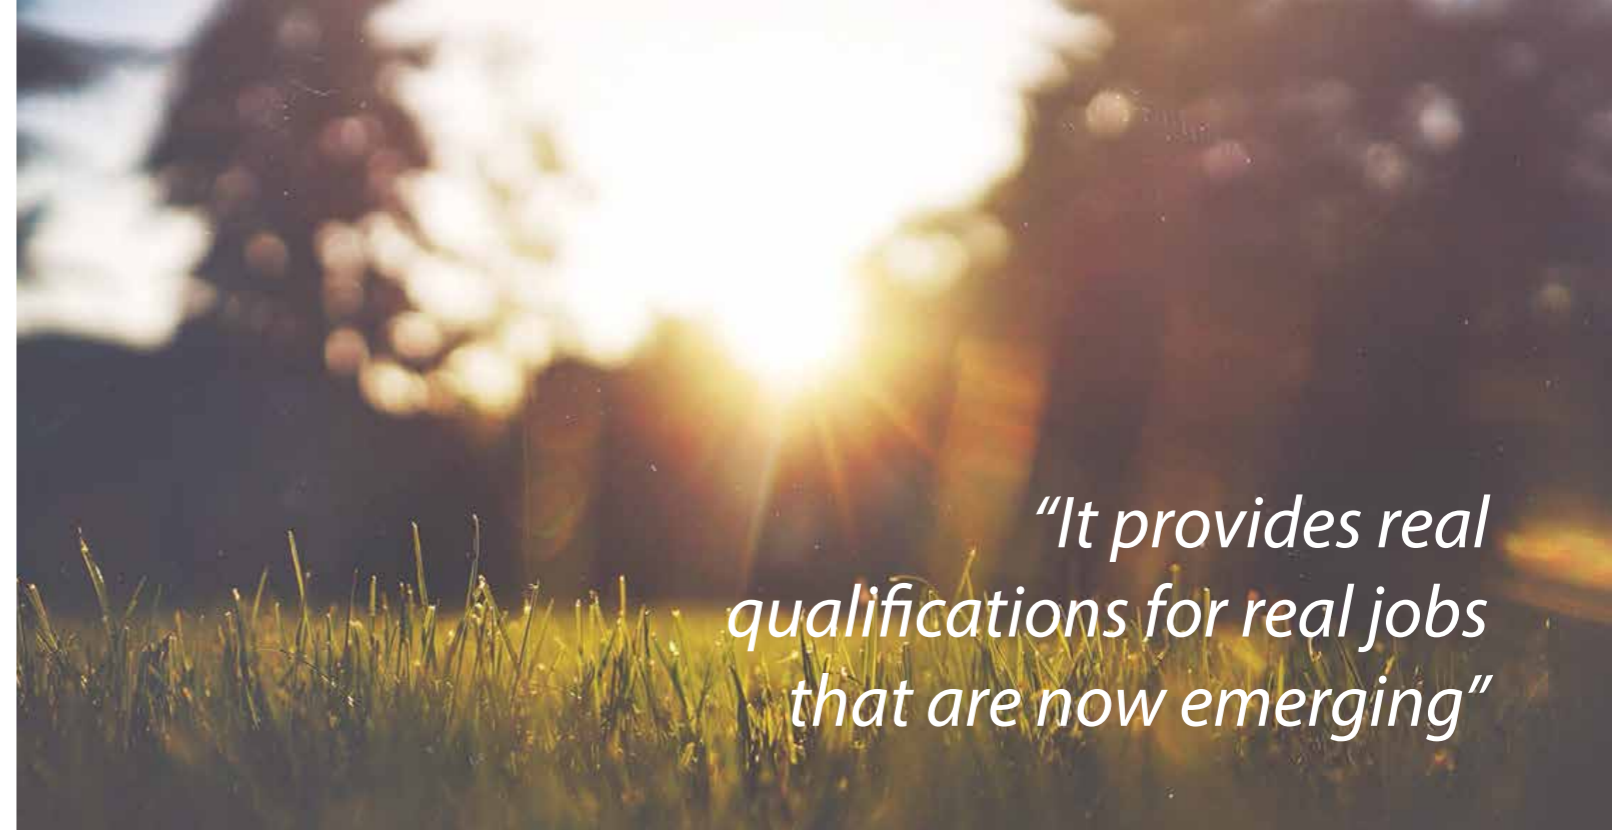

Building jobs

In response to the growing Indigenous ranger programs and land management services in remote and regional Australia and the new direction of Government to support land based economies in Indigenous communities, Corporate Culcha and their training partner and RTO, Stat have released the new, nationally accredited training course - Certificate III in Indigenous Land Management.

It provides real qualifications for real jobs that are now emerging and importantly provides accreditation for existing workers in ranger programs and land management services, formalising the extensive knowledge, experience and skill sets of these workers.

By virtue of their remoteness and fence-line proximity to mining sites, gas fields, local councils and national infrastructure projects Indigenous communities, CDP's, Indigenous organisations and SMEs are well placed to contribute to the resource sector, infrastructure projects and Government contracts across Australia.

These sectors have high need for rehabilitation and revegetation, weed control, landscaping and facility management and maintenance services.

"It provides real qualifications for real jobs that are now emerging"

The Delivery

The training is delivered over ten days face-to-face (in a block or split into 2 x five day blocks), with a blend of theory and practical work. There is also the opportunity for on-going training if required.

Corporate Culcha's Certificate III in Indigenous Land Management together with our Indigenous business development expertise provides the opportunity to build and recognise skills and develop business capabilities.

The ILM training boosts adults into work, while our business development support grows capability to foster viable Indigenous business. Corporate Culcha can then support the development of relationships and business opportunities with fence-line and regional projects or industry to generate economic and social benefits and importantly jobs.
